STATEMENT REGARDING ORAL ARGUMENT

The City believes oral argument is not necessary because the factual and legal issues in this appeal involve settled issues of law, so argument will not assist this Court in determining whether the evidence in the record creates a fact issue as to Appellants' Monell claims.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a) 10

RESPONSE TO STATEMENT OF ISSUES

1. The district court correctly entered summary judgment in favor of the City because the evidence does not create a genuine issue of material fact concerning the reasonableness of the Officers' use of deadly force under the circumstances.

2. The district court correctly entered summary judgment in favor of the City because this Court's precedent forecloses Monell liability against the City on Appellants' failure-to-train claims when this Court has already held that the Officers' conduct did not violate a clearly established constitutional right.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This appeal is the second time this case has been heard by the Court. In its prior examination of this case, the Court examined the undisputed facts of the incident at issue. See generally Dawes v. City of Dallas ("Dawes I"), No. 22-10876, 2024 WL 2268529 (5th Cir. May 20, 2024), cert. denied, 145 S. Ct. 2699 (2025). As such, in addition to citations to the record on appeal, the City cites to the undisputed facts as described by the Court in Dawes I.[1]

[1] "The law-of-the-case doctrine generally provides that when a court decides upon a rule of law, that decision should continue to govern the same issues in subsequent stages in the same case." Winfrey v. Rogers, 901 F.3d 483, 491 (5th Cir. 2018) (cleaned up). "The doctrine is meant to promote judicial efficiency so that appellate courts do not continually have to reexamine subsequent proceedings in the same case. It forecloses reexamination on a subsequent appeal." Id. None of the exceptions to the rule—new evidence, new controlling authority, or a clearly-erroneous decision—apply. Id.; see also

On January 17, 2017, six officers with the Dallas Police Department ("DPD")—Officers Christopher Hess, Jason Kimpel, Christopher Alisch, Zachary Hopkins, Erin Evans, and Peter Lickwar (the "Officers")—were dispatched to investigate a suspicious vehicle parked in the parking lot of a Dallas apartment complex. Dawes I, 2024 WL 2268529, at *1; ROA.805. Dawes and Rosales (together, "Appellants") were inside the vehicle, a Dodge Journey, which had been reported stolen. Dawes I, 2024 WL 2268529, at *1; ROA.810-11. Officers Alisch and Hopkins were the first to arrive at the scene. Dawes I, 2024 WL 2268529, at *1; ROA.1092 [Hopkins Bodycam 2:30-3:00]. They located the vehicle, "which was boxed in on three of four sides—by fences to the front and left and by another car to the right." Dawes I, 2024 WL 2268529, at *1; ROA.1092 [Hopkins Bodycam 3:15]. Officers Alisch and Hopkins immediately began giving loud verbal commands to Appellants to "put [their] hands out the window." Dawes I, 2024 WL 2268529, at *1; ROA.1092 [Hopkins Bodycam 3:15-3:30].

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The Court should affirm the district court's judgment. The undisputed facts establish that: the Officers were responding to a call of a suspicious vehicle; the vehicle

United States v. Smith, 814 F.3d 268, 273 (5th Cir. 2016) ("The law-of-the-case doctrine bars reexamination of issues of law or fact decided on appeal in subsequent proceedings in a trial or appellate court."); Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. Farese, 248 F. App'x 555, 558 (5th Cir. 2007) ("The law of the case doctrine provides that a decision of a factual or legal issue by an appellate court establishes the law of the case and must be followed in all subsequent proceedings in the same case in the trial court.").

was reported to be stolen; the Officers identified themselves as police and gave repeated verbal commands to the occupants of the vehicle to show their hands; the occupants of the vehicle ignored the commands; the occupants of the vehicle instead started the engine and began trying to back the vehicle out of parking space striking a fence and patrol car in the process; that two officers were in the path of the vehicle within seconds of when officers initiated force; and the officers that fired their weapons still believed fellow officers were in the vehicle's path and thus in imminent danger. On these facts, the district court correctly held that the Officers' use of force did not violate the Fourth Amendment.

Additionally, even assuming the Officers' force was unreasonable (it was not), the district court correctly entered summary judgment for the City because Appellants failed to demonstrate Monell liability. In holding that Appellants could not establish Monell liability, the district court correctly applied this Court's controlling precedent holding that where, as here, municipal employees' conduct does not violate clearly established law, their governmental employer cannot be deemed to have been deliberately indifferent on a failure-to-train theory.

ARGUMENT

I. A motion for summary judgment based on use of force is reviewed de novo.

"The court shall grant summary judgment if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a).

> [W]here the nonmovant bears the burden of proof at trial, the movant may merely point to an absence of evidence, thus shifting to the non-movant the burden of demonstrating by competent summary judgment proof that there is an issue of material fact warranting trial. Only when "there is sufficient evidence favoring the nonmoving party for a jury to return a verdict for that party" is a full trial on the merits warranted.

Lindsey v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 16 F.3d 616, 618 (5th Cir. 1994) (internal citations omitted) (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 249 (1986)). All reasonable inferences must be viewed in the light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment, and any doubt must be resolved in favor of the non-moving party. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986); Hillman v. Loga, 697 F.3d 299, 302 (5th Cir. 2012).

To prevail on an excessive force claim, a plaintiff must show that the force employed was "objectively unreasonable." Graham v. Connor, 490 U.S. 386, 397 (1989). "Excessive force claims are necessarily fact-intensive; whether the force used is excessive or unreasonable depends on the facts and circumstances of each particular case."

Darden v. City of Fort Worth, 880 F.3d 722, 728 (5th Cir. 2018) (cleaned up). The focus is not best practices or desired outcomes, but instead, "the touchstone of [the Court's] inquiry is simply the reasonableness of the force employed." Buehler v. Dear, 27 F.4th 969, 981 (5th Cir. 2022) (emphasis added).

II. The district court correctly rendered summary judgment for the City on Appellants' Monell claims on the ground that the Officers did not use unreasonable force under the Fourth Amendment.

Appellants concede the settled principle of law that if a municipality's employee has not violated an individual's constitutional rights, Monell liability cannot attach to the municipal employer. (See Appellants' Br. 30 ["If the Section 1983 claims against police officers are dismissed because of the lack of a constitutional violation, the claims against the City would also be defeated."].) See Hicks-Fields v. Harris County, 860 F.3d 803, 808 (5th Cir. 2017) ("'As is well established, every Monell claim requires "an underlying constitutional violation."'"). For the reasons stated below, the salient undisputed facts of this case—as determined in Dawes I—show the officers did not violate Appellants' Fourth Amendment rights. As such, their Monell claims fail, and the Court should affirm the district court's judgment.

A. The Graham factors show the Officers' use of force was not unreasonable.

Determining whether a use of force was reasonable under the Fourth Amendment "is not capable of precise definition or mechanical application." Graham, 490 U.S. 386 at 396 (quoting Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520, 559 (1979)). Instead, "its proper application requires careful attention to the facts and circumstances of each particular case, including" what are known as the Graham factors: (1) "the severity of the crime at issue," (2) "whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others," and (3) "whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight." Id.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should affirm the district court's judgment.
