Although the district court's error in this case is plain, the important First Amendment and preliminary-injunction issues in this case warrant oral argument.

INTRODUCTION

Tennessee House Bill 1891 ("Act") violates the First Amendment by restricting fully protected speech on "social media" websites in multiple ways. The Act targets specific websites based on their content. And it restricts users' access to, and engagement with, protected speech by requiring those websites to obtain (1) age verification for all users, § 47-18-5703(a)(1), and (2) parental consent for minors, § 47-18-5703(a)(2).[1] These requirements violate the First Amendment. E.g., Free Speech Coal., Inc. v. Paxton, 145 S. Ct. 2291, 2309 (2025) ("FSC") ("submitting to age verification is a burden on the exercise of" the "right to access" protected speech); Packingham v. North Carolina, 582 U.S. 98, 107 (2017) (First Amendment protects "access" to social media websites); Brown v. Ent. Merchs. Ass'n, 564 U.S. 786, 795 n.3 (2011) (governments lack the "power to prevent children from hearing or saying anything without their parents' prior consent").

Yet the district court here erroneously denied NetChoice's motion for a preliminary injunction preventing the Act's enforcement against NetChoice's covered members. It held that NetChoice did not establish irreparable harm, without first considering the merits of NetChoice's First Amendment challenge—or the implications those irreparable harms have on "the balance of equities" and "public interest." Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 32 (2008).

interest because "it is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party's constitutional rights." Connection Distrib. Co. v. Reno, 154 F.3d 281, 288 (6th Cir. 1998) (citation omitted). That is especially true here, where an injunction would prevent the balkanization of the internet, where people in Tennessee have less access to fully protected speech than people just State over.

The record here contains ample evidence of real and ongoing irreparable harm. In addition, all NetChoice members must expend "unrecoverable compliance costs"—which this Court and the Supreme Court have recognized constitute irreparable harm. Commonwealth v. Biden, 57 F.4th 545, 556 (6th Cir. 2023); see Ohio v. EPA, 603 U.S. 279, 292 (2024). And preventing the grave irreparable harms imposed by Tennessee's restrictions on protected speech and people to one speech are in the public interest because "it is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a party's constitutional rights." Connection Distrib. Co. v. Reno, 154 F.3d 281, 288 (6th Cir. 1998) (citation omitted).

In denying NetChoice a preliminary injunction, the district court flouted this Court's instruction that "the determination of whether [plaintiff] is likely to succeed on the merits of its First Amendment claim controls the question of the validity of the preliminary injunction." Planet Aid v. City of St. Johns, 782 F.3d 318, 323 (6th Cir. 2015).

City of St. Johns*, 782 F.3d 318, 323 (6th Cir. 2015).

The district court committed further errors. For instance, although the district court acknowledged that Defendant could enforce the Act at any time, it denied relief because NetChoice could not disprove the court's improper assumption that any enforcement (and thus injury) is sufficiently "imminent" to justify injunctive relief. Opinion, R.78, Page ID ## 2354-59. But the "State has not suggested that the newly enacted law will not be enforced, and [there is] no reason to assume otherwise." *Virginia v. Am. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Factual background

1. NetChoice members' websites curate, disseminate, and enable vast amounts of speech protected by the First Amendment.

NetChoice is a leading internet trade association. Cleland Decl., R.8-2, Page ID ## 60-61. Under the Act's coverage definition, the Act regulates websites operated by the following NetChoice members: (1) Automattic (Tumblr); (2) Discord; (3) Dreamwidth; (4) Meta (Facebook, Instagram, and Threads); (5) Nextdoor; (6) Pinterest; (7) Reddit; (8) Snap Inc. (Snapchat); (9) X; and (10) YouTube. Cleland Decl., R.8-2, Page ID # 67.[2] This brief refers to members with services the Act regulates as, simply, "members."

The Act regulates NetChoice members based on their shared speech-facilitating functions. It is aimed at "social media" websites that "allow users to upload content . . . to share [it] with others," where those "viewing the content can" "react to it, comment on it, or share it themselves." Moody v. NetChoice, LLC, 603 U.S. 707, 719 (2024).

As a result, members are covered if they "allow[] users to gain access to information and communicate with one another about it." Packingham, 582 U.S. at 107.

[2] Automattic, Discord, and Reddit joined NetChoice after litigation began, and are included in NetChoice's First Amended Complaint (R.88)—filed after this appeal was docketed. Amended Complaint, R.88, Page ID # 2422.

and that NetChoice members' unrecoverable compliance costs are not irreparable harms either. Opinion, R.78, Page ID ## 2351-62.

2. Parents already have many tools to oversee how their children use the internet.

"[P]arents may rightly decide to regulate their child's use of social media . . . And many tools exist to help parents with this endeavor." NetChoice, LLC v. Griffin, 2025 WL 978607, at *3 (W.D. Ark. Mar. 31, 2025).

Parents can control what devices minors can access—and when. Cleland Decl., R.8-2, Page ID # 62. Not all devices are internet-enabled. Id. And devices themselves come with many built-in parental-control options. Cleland Decl., R.8-2, Page ID # 63.

In the month that followed the district court's denial of NetChoice's motion, the parties attempted to negotiate an agreed-upon case management order that could have obviated the need for this appeal. The parties could not reach an agreement. Defendant continues to refuse to stay enforcement of the Act against NetChoice's members while this case proceeds to final judgment. This timely appeal followed.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

NetChoice established irreparable harm, including based on its likelihood of success on the merits of its First Amendment claims, the unrecoverable compliance costs its covered members face, and the infringements on users' free-speech rights.

I. NetChoice established irreparable harm, including based on its likelihood of success on the merits of its First Amendment claims, the unrecoverable compliance costs its covered members face, and the infringements on users' free-speech rights.

NetChoice's covered members currently face the "Hobson's choice" of either violating the Act and "expos[ing] themselves to potentially huge liability" or "suffer[ing] the injury of obeying the law during the pendency of the proceedings and any further review." Morales v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 504 U.S. 374, 381 (1992). In the face of that choice, NetChoice member Nextdoor has stopped permitting Tennessee minors to access Nextdoor. Motion, R.42, Page ID ## 1851-52.

A. The record here contains unrebutted evidence of irreparable harm.

NetChoice's covered members currently face the "Hobson's choice" of either violating the Act and "expos[ing] themselves to potentially huge liability" or "suffer[ing] the injury of obeying the law during the pendency of

ARGUMENT

I. This Act's speech restrictions irreparably harm NetChoice's members and their users, and the district court's irreparable-harm analysis violates this Court's precedent.

One NetChoice member—Nextdoor—stopped disseminating fully protected speech to minors in Tennessee because the Act took effect without an injunction. As a result, both Nextdoor and Tennessee minors who would like to use Nextdoor have suffered—and continue to suffer—the First Amendment harms that this Court's precedent presumes. See infra pp. 30–34. This "loss of First Amendment freedoms . . . unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." Cuomo, 592 U.S. at 19 (quoting Elrod, 427 U.S. at 373).

This harm will persist unless and until a court issues an order enjoining enforcement of the Act. And these harms are irreparable: When NetChoice prevails on the merits in this case, Nextdoor will not be able to go back in time to provide minor users in Tennessee access to information about the

A. The record contains ample evidence of irreparable harm.

The uncontested record evidence demonstrates that NetChoice members face two kinds of irreparable harm from the Act's enforcement: (1) First Amendment harms; and (2) unrecoverable compliance costs.

First Amendment harms. NetChoice members face present and ongoing First Amendment harms.

In addition, all NetChoice covered members likewise must expend unrecoverable compliance costs to implement the Act's unconstitutional speech restrictions. These "unrecoverable compliance costs" are irreparable harms to covered websites under binding precedent. Biden, 57 F.4th at 556; see Ohio, 603 U.S. at 292 (same).
