STATEMENT REGARDING ORAL ARGUMENT

STATEMENT REGARDING ORAL ARGUMENT

This appeal does not present unique legal issues. While the record is somewhat convoluted, the evidence reflected therein is not particularly complex or unusual.

This appeal does not present unique legal issues. While the record is somewhat convoluted, the evidence reflected therein is not particularly complex or unusual. Rather, the record consists of evidence regarding the marital estate and factors supporting a disproportionate division of that estate favoring the wife. There were no contested property values at the trial court as Appellant failed to prepare an inventory and appraisement. Appellant further failed to respond to interrogatory and disclosure requests, and submitted inadequate documents in response to production requests.

One of Appellant's grounds for appeal involves the performance of Appellant's trial counsel. Since that is not an issue for appeal, there is no need for oral argument on this issue. This appeal involves issues this Court has resolved many times before, and without the need for oral argument.

That being said, Appellee conditions her request for oral argument upon Appellant's request for same and in the event that this Court orders oral argument.

ARGUMENT & AUTHORITIES

A. Standard of Review—Abuse of Discretion

Most family law appealable issues are evaluated for abuse of discretion by a trial court. In re A.B.P., 291 S.W.3d 91, 95 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2009, no pet.) A trial court abuses its discretion when it acts arbitrarily or unreasonably, or without any reference to guiding rules and principles. *Worford v. A. STANDARD OF REVIEW—ABUSE OF DISCRETION.

Most family law appealable issues are evaluated for abuse of discretion by a trial court. In re A.B.P., 291 S.W.3d 91, 95 (Tex.App.-Dallas 2009, no pet.) A trial court abuses its discretion when it acts arbitrarily or unreasonably, or without any reference to guiding rules and principles. Worford v. Stamper, 801 S.W.2d 108, 109 (Tex.1990) (per curiam). In an appellate factual sufficiency review, all the evidence in the record, both supporting and contrary to the trial courts' finding is examined. See Ortiz v. Jones, 917 S.W.2d 770, 772 (Tex.1996) (per curiam); In re C.A.S., 405 S.W.3d 373, 382–83 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2013, no pet.). Reversal on appeal is granted only if the trial court's finding misapplied the law, or is so against the great weight of the evidence as to be clearly wrong and unjust. Id.

When determining if the trial court abused its discretion, the appellate court considers whether the trial court (1) had sufficient evidence upon which to exercise its discretion, and (2) erred in its application of that discretion. Moroch v. Collins, 174 S.W.3d 849, 857 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2005, pet. denied). A trial court does not abuse its discretion if there is some evidence of a substantive and probative character to support the decision. Id.; see also In re C.A.S., 405 S.W.3d at 383.

Trial courts are tasked with dividing the community estate in a "just and right" manner, considering the rights of both parties. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. § 7.001. Thus, a trial court would abuse its discretion in dividing community property if that property was not divided in a just and right manner. Trial courts are afforded wide discretion in dividing marital property upon divorce and, absent an abuse of discretion, this Court will not disturb the property division. Murff, 615 S.W.2d at 698; Chavez v. Chavez, 269 S.W.3d 763, 766 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2008, no pet.). "Equality in the division is not required, and this Court indulges every reasonable presumption in favor of the proper exercise of discretion by the trial court in dividing the community estate." Toles v. Toles, 45 S.W.3d 252, 264 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2001, pet. denied). Appellate courts reverse only from the trial court. Appellee cannot say similar relief should be granted to him on appeal when he never requested such relief from the trial court.

if the record demonstrates the trial court clearly abused its discretion, and the error materially affected the just and right division of the community estate. Jacobs v. Jacobs, 687 S.W.2d 731, 732–33 (Tex. 1985).

Malcolm incorrectly argues that the first mentioned ground for divorce is the only ground, misunderstanding that a court's later rulings may add to the grounds for divorce.

Malcolm, in his Appellant Brief on page 31 (Issue I, point B), focuses on the differences in the grounds for divorce as found in (1) the Trial Court's Memorandum Opinion (CR1 251), (2) the Final Decree of Divorce (CR1 255), (3) the Trial Court's initial findings and conclusions (CR3 4), and (4) the Trial Court's supplemental findings (CR3 7 & 8). Malcolm uses these differences to incorrectly conclude that he was found not at fault for the divorce since the Trial Court's ruling memorandum and the decree only listed the ground of insupportability.

Malcolm uses these differences to incorrectly conclude that he was found not at fault for the divorce since the Trial Court's ruling memorandum and the decree only listed the ground of insupportability.

Malcolm, however, fails to acknowledge that under well-established decisional precedent, any conflict between the original findings and later findings are resolved definitely in favor of the later findings. See Redman v. Bennett, 401 S.W.2d 891 (Tex. Civ. App.—Tyler 1966, no writ); Anderson v. Geraghty, 212 S.W.2d 972, 974 (Tex. Civ. App.—San Antonio 1948, no writ). The later findings merely state other grounds for the divorce, i.e., adultery and cruelty, in addition to insupportability. So, this is not the absolution. Malcolm is searching for and his divorce was not granted solely on the ground of insupportability. Of note, Malcolm states no legal precedent for this particular argument. Therefore, this Court should overrule Appellant's issue I, point B.

[Reply Issue I, Points C and D, and Reply Issue II are omitted from this transcription.]

D. Reply Issue III

By not granting Malcolm a new trial, the Trial Court avoided abusing their discretion as Malcolm has no right to a new trial based on ineffective assistance of counsel as his civil matter does not involve termination of parental rights or involuntary commitment.

Malcolm alleges an issue on appeal based on his right that does not exist for him in this matter. Malcolm requests this Appellate Court to reverse and remand for a new trial due to ineffective assistance of counsel. Effective assistance of counsel, however, is not a right that extends to this case. Generally, the doctrine of ineffective assistance of counsel does not extend to civil cases. See In re Interest of P.S., 505 S.W.3d 106, 110 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2016, no pet.); McCoy v. Tex. Instruments, Inc., 183 S.W.3d 548, 553 (Tex. App.–Dallas 2006, no pet.). Civil cases in which the right to effective assistance of counsel has been found to apply involve the termination of an individual's parental rights, see In re M.S., 115 S.W.3d 534, 544 (Tex. 2003), or the deprivation of liberty, see Lanett v. State, 750 S.W.2d 302 (Tex. App.–Dallas 1988, writ denied) (involuntary civil commitment).

Appellant cites no case law supporting his contention that he has a right to effective assistance of counsel, because there is none. There is only case law that this right does not extend to him because this civil case does not concern termination of parental rights or deprivation of liberty. See In re MS, 115 S.W.3d at 544 and Lanett, 750 S.W.2d at 302.

Since Malcolm has no right to a new trial because of ineffective assistance of counsel, it is impossible for the trial court to have abused its discretion in denying a new trial. There is no need to examine how his counsel allegedly failed him with discovery or at trial. See App/ant Brief, Issue 3, points B, C, and D at pp 50-57. Malcolm was already on his second attorney, so we know he knows how to fire and hire a new attorney. See the order granting Ben Booth's withdrawal, CR1 124-125 and the appearance of Paul Gomez, CR1 120.

counsel, however, is not a right that extends to this case. Generally, the doctrine of ineffective assistance of counsel does not extend to civil cases. See In re Interest of P.S., 505 S.W.3d 106, 110 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2016, no pet.); McCoy v. Tex. Instruments, Inc., 183 S.W.3d 548, 553 (Tex. App.–Dallas 2006, no pet.). Civil cases in which the right to effective assistance of counsel has been found to apply involve the termination of an individual's parental rights, see In re M.S., 115 S.W.3d 534, 544 (Tex. 2003), or the deprivation of liberty, see Lanett v. State, 750 S.W.2d 302 (Tex. App.-Dallas 1988, writ denied) (involuntary civil commitment).

Appellant cites no case law supporting his contention that he has a right to effective assistance of counsel, because there is none. There is only case law that this right does not extend to him because this civil case does not concern termination of parental rights or deprivation of liberty. See In re M.S., 115 S.W.3d at 544 and Lanett, 750 S.W.2d at 302.

Since Malcolm has no right to a new trial because of ineffective assistance of counsel, it is impossible for the trial court to have abused its discretion in denying a new trial. There is no need to examine how his counsel allegedly failed him with discovery or at trial. See App/ant Brief, Issue 3, points B, C, and D at pp 50-57.

However, Malcolm skips over one cited statement made in T.L.T.: "A movant must affirmatively plead for attorneys' fees unless the issue is waived or tried by consent.

There is no need to examine how his counsel allegedly failed him with discovery or at trial. Malcolm was already on his second attorney, so we know he knows how to fire and hire a new attorney. See the order granting Ben Boothe's withdrawal, CR1 124-125 and the appearance of Paul Gomez, CR1 120.

E. Reply Issue IV

The Trial Court appropriately awarded Veronica attorney fees on appeal because she requested them, and Malcolm did not.

Malcolm complains that the trial court erred in not making the same attorney fee finding for him as it did for Veronica. Malcolm relies on In the Interest of T.L.T. which cites several cases pertaining to appellate attorney fees. See Appellant's Brief p. 59, citing In the Interest of T.L.T., No. 05-16-01367-CV, 2018 Tex. App. LEXIS 2025, at *10 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2018, no pet.).

In re Pecht, 874 S.W.2d 797, 803 (Tex. App. — Texarkana 1994, no writ)." Veronica did this Court that Malcolm was continuing to abuse Veronica during the divorce and plead for attorney fees in her Motion for Temporary Orders Pending Appeal. See CR5 appeal, continuing to cause her emotional distress.

11-12, item d. Presently, Veronica is unaware of Malcolm requesting any attorney fees Veronica was awarded a disproportionate share of the known estate, but not on appeal. Thus, his requested modification by this Appellate Court is impossible to even one hundred percent of the known estate, as Malcolm claims to this Court in grant as Malcolm did not affirmatively plead for attorney fees. some parts of his brief. Malcolm was awarded all property in his possession.

CONCLUSION AND PRAYER

For these reasons, Veronica respectfully requests the following relief:

[The opening paragraphs of the filed conclusion are omitted from this transcription.]

- That this Court deny Malcolm's claim that ineffective assistance of counsel is grounds for a new trial or for reversal on appeal.
- That this Court affirm the trial court's finding of adultery.
- That this Court affirm the trial court's finding of cruelty.
- That this Court affirm the trial court's division of the community property based on the testimony of Veronica.
- That this Court affirm the award of $14,000.00 attorney fees to Veronica's attorney as set forth in the Temporary Orders on Appeal.
- That this Court affirm the trial court's findings of fault.
- Further, that this Court grant her such other relief, both general and special, at law or in equity, to which she may show herself to be justly entitled.
